The journey to the Spencer House was a perfect evation, passing through the heart of the mannfacturing districts beneath floating hammers and amid the shouts and huzzas of the artizons of the different establishments, teaponded to by the shouts and huzzas of the procession. The enthusiasm was vast along the whole line.

At the Spencer House the crowd became much larger than ever, and, as soon as the carriage stopped, three hearty cheers were given for the bero of the Senate. The speeches speak for themselves:

WARHINGTOX, June 15,

The Administration fully confides in Gev. Cumming's assurances of peace in Utah. Even before his dispatch came, similar information was received from the Indian Agent, Forney, but not disclosed, the Government prefarring to await confirmation. Cumming is a man of deliberate indgment and determined conrage, and not likely to be easily depend by anybody, and fully conscious of all his present tesponalbilities. His private letters state that the fact which most impressed him in Sall Lake was the absence of all military preparation or means for organized resistance. He felt satisfied that Johnston's otiginal force was more than sufficient without resisforcements to have conquered the whole force which Brigham Young could menter, anch was his deficiency in warlike resources.

Accounts from the army represent great disastifaction existing at the prospect of a probable pacification, and the disappointment at losing a chance for a campaign after Winter's hardship.

Johnston was opposed to fire. Cumming's experiment of peaceful appeal, and declined any countenance to his entry into Salt Lake without being attended by troops. Cumming knew their presence would lead to bloodabed if at did not provoke if by outrages, and hence he determined on the course which be pursued against the advice of the army of ficers. This may axplain the temper of Johnston dispatches, and on that day (the 23d) they undootbedly reached his camp.

n every voting precinct. Organization is as neces-pary to a political party as discipline is to an army. It is indispensably necessary to certain success. In this work the Americans in every county in the State should be engaged without an hour's delay. Their county committees have been appointed, but the labor of preparing for the contest should not he left to three or four or a dozen or twenty ardent and active friends of American principles. It is the duty of every individual of the party to contribute hls efforts to concentrate upon our candidates the whole American vote in every precinct in the Comwhole Ametican vote in every precinct in the Commonwealth. Let them one and all shake off every symptom of lethargy, and enter actively upon the performance of this ascred and patriotic duty. let words of encouragement from American lips be echoed in American hearts from one end of the State to the other, until the whole of our 'datk and bloody round" of Kentucky shall glow with real, earnest, and determined American enthusiasm.

Now is the time for action. If the friends of merican principles In every precinct will do their duty from now antil the night of the first Monday in August, the success of our candidates is certain. Let it be remembered that the success of the American candidates in Kentucky in this election will be the harbinger of a glorious American victory in the Presidential election in 1860, and let one and all, without delay, unite with heart and band and lator incessantly and without tiring to achieve this result, which will gladden the hearts of patriots throughout the nation.

Where have not have the light of the second board of the s the-wool Democrats quail at the sturdy blows he deals against modern Democracy. The popularity of our candidate is daily increasing, and his pres-ence among the people is a living and eloquent refuation of the vile slanders that have been burled at hlm by reckless and maliguant Democratic party leaders. Their vain boasting is but the echo of their desperate fears for the result of the election.
They are conscious that the hearte of the people are with McKee, who appears as the champion of pa-triotle principles, which he avows boldly and expounds clearly, giving an intelligent reason for the failt that is in him, and appealing to his loug exparience in a clerk's office, at the har, on the experience in a cierk's office, at the har, on the bench, and in the legislative halls for the evidence of his qualifications for the office for which he is a candidate. His opponent, Mr. Revill, claims the votes of the people because he is a Domocrat and has a udge's certificate of qualification in his pocket, without knowing either what constitutes a Democrat or why anything except a paper certificate of qualification should be required for this responsible and mportant office.

Judge McKee has borne himself gallantly in this contest. He has given to the people nbundant rea-sons why he should be preferred for the clerkship of the Court of Appeals. He has appealed in a manly tone to their intelligence and patriotism, while his competitor builds his hopes of success on party feeling alone. If these two men were candidates of he same party, the superiority of McKee Is so plainare candidates before the same people. The vast ly evident that he would receive twenty votes to each one that would be given to Revill. They superiority of McKee in every requisite qualification cannot be successfully controverted, and we believe that he will receive the support of every intelligent voter in Kentucky who dares to vote his own seniments and to act independently of the tyrannical and despotic dictation of Democratic party leaders.
